The quarterly ESG screening examines if the investment portfolios meet the requirements of at least the following list of international treaties, conventions and global norms. These treaties, conventions and global norms come from intergovernmental organizations and can in many cases be ratified by national governments. In addition, the periodic screening also examines whether the investment portfolios meet other treaties, conventions, global norms, guidelines, benchmarks, industry initiatives, frameworks and (certification) programs (mostly intended for companies). This list is not captured in this document due to the non-existence of formal criteria what constitute a breach. Therefore we do not want to make claims regarding our ability to identify all company in breach of these treaties, conventions, global norms, guidelines, benchmarks, industry initiatives, frameworks and (certification) programs (mostly intended for companies).
